The description of manna in the Bible matches what Danin found in the Sinai Desert. He soon discovered that the white drops on the shrub's stems were the digestive byproduct of insects that feed on the plant's sap, known as honeydew. The secretion, formed at night, is loaded with sugar. The sweet liquid hardens to the form of white granules and is still ...

Larry worked for Consumers Energy for 32 years and spent 8 years as an independent engineer in electric generation, including coal, gas, biomass (wood chips, coconut shells, rice husks), wind and solar. While working in Argentina, Morocco, and India, the couple dove head-first into helping local communities.
