

Without the sun's radiant energy, the earth would gradually cool, in time becoming ice. [12] observed that the network of stations measuring solar radiation data is sparse in many countries. In Nigeria, only few stations have been measuring the daily solar radiation consistently. It is therefore, necessary to appreciate radiation from

Solar-powered irrigation pumps and other appliances have demonstrated their power to transform Niger by increasing crop yields and production. With $50 million in funding from the International Development Association, NESAP works by extending credit to private companies that sell productive-use appliances such as solar-powered pumps.
